Together, we make a difference.
We create lasting solutions to homelessness by:

Honoring the inherent dignity of those we serve, affirming their capabilities and fostering their hope that a better life is possible.

Building strong, caring communities through the integration of housing, health care and supportive services.

Advocating for social equality and challenging the status quo on behalf of the individuals and families we serve.

Achieving excellence through continuous quality assurance, innovation and professional development.

Using resources judiciously and effectively.
Dear friends,

After two years of tremendous growth in homelessness, the Colorado Coalition for the Homeless spent 2016 broadening and deepening our services that help people overcome homelessness, while embarking on new initiatives to end homelessness in Colorado, creating better communities for all of us. In this report, you will read that we served thousands of people with health care, housing and supportive services, helping them achieve and sustain stable lives.

The causes of homelessness are as varied as the human experience, but one fact is constant: homelessness is almost never a personal choice, but rather the tragic result of environmental factors and traumatic personal experiences. Together, the Coalition and our partners address the diverse circumstances and needs of individuals, families and special groups like Veterans and those recovering from addiction.

We are working in three areas to make this vision a reality by:

• filling gaps in the services that people need—in health care, in housing, and in supportive services—so that the entire continuum can work more effectively.

• working with public and private partners on innovative ways to fund these vital services, and demonstrate that ending homelessness creates economic benefits for our communities.

• building at least 500 new homes to meet the critical housing needs of those recovering from homelessness in this very expensive housing market.

Perhaps the most vital partners in this community-wide coalition to end homelessness are people like you, whose advocacy, financial gifts and voluntarism are critical to our success. Thank you.

Gratefully,

John Parvensky
President & CEO

T.R. Reid
Chair, Board of Directors
During 2016 we broadened the services we offer to individuals to support their health and recovery, delivering 110,000 health care visits to 13,421 patients through our four health centers.

The Social Impact Bond partnership, or SIB, initiated early in 2016, placed the Coalition and our partners squarely in the vanguard of innovative funding models to end homelessness, coupled with a robust evaluation to demonstrate community benefits in ending homelessness. The SIB, a partnership of the Coalition, the City and County of Denver, and private investors, funds construction of permanent housing, integrated health care and supportive services to 250 adults. Participants experienced chronic, long-term homelessness, and have been cycling through the criminal justice system. The program will follow program participants for five years, demonstrating housing stability and reductions in arrests, jail and court costs. As these individuals sustain their stability, their use of expensive taxpayer-funded services will decline and the City and County of Denver will use these savings to repay the investors.

Year 1—2016—was dedicated to enrolling program participants and their move-in to housing and initiation of services. Early progress is encouraging: enrollment of program participants was ahead of projections at year-end, and all participants enthusiastically accepted housing and services.

Serve the whole person; serve the whole community

Overcoming homelessness requires much more than simply a roof overhead. The key to lasting solutions is to provide comprehensive care and opportunities to help the individual overcome their obstacles to health and stability.
“CCH is making a huge difference. Providing the homeless a permanent place to live is a major step. And, providing access to excellent health care makes a huge difference. I always see people in the homeless community who remind me of an uncle, cousin, or maybe someone I liked back in high school. We are all human—some of us are just luckier than others.”

ANNALEE SCHORR, ARTIST AND DONOR

Throughout 2016, metro Denver experienced historic levels of residential development, yet low-income individuals and families found themselves in an increasingly hostile environment of escalating rents and dwindling supply of affordable housing.
An independent survey by the Urban Institute found that 89% of very low-income households in Denver are “housing burdened,” that is, must spend more than 30% of their income on rent. This parallels the annual Point In Time survey of homelessness, finding that 52% of respondents were working yet could not afford housing.

The Colorado Coalition for the Homeless is developing housing as quickly as resources allow. In February, we opened Renaissance at North Colorado Station, a 103-unit apartment residence accommodating single adults and families with children. A separate wing dedicated to a sober living community promotes the inter-dependent supportive community to help residents succeed. Case management staff are available on-site to assist residents in accessing health care and other resources that help to improve housing stability.

We began constructing Renaissance Downtown Lofts, 100 apartments dedicated to adults recovering from chronic, long-term homelessness through the comprehensive program funded through the Denver Social Impact Bond. This property will open for occupancy late in 2017.

Metro Denver still needs approximately 23,000 units of housing for individuals and households whose income fall below 30% of area median income (AMI). The Coalition is committed to building more housing to meet this pressing need and plans to build at least 500 new housing units over the next five years.

With this goal in mind, we are navigating several challenges in the year ahead. Denver’s booming construction environment has dramatically increased land acquisition and construction costs, slowing our progress as we compete for talent and appropriate building sites. More concerning are the proposals at the federal level proposing to make draconian cuts to affordable housing subsidies, low-income housing tax credits and housing development funds. We will continue to monitor federal funding proposals and advocate for programs that will benefit affordable housing efforts in Colorado and across the nation.
The Schorrs know that building a life is best accomplished by building community, and they want to make Denver a great place to live for years to come.

They have seen how Denver’s growth has squeezed those living on the margins, those struggling financially to maintain housing in a rapidly gentrifying region. They know that when people struggle with homelessness, their struggle impacts quality of life for everyone.

Wag and Annalee have been stalwart contributors to the Coalition over two decades. In addition to their generous financial gifts, Annalee has led efforts to provide the loan of artworks that grace both the Stout Street Health Center and the West End Health Center, and both have introduced many new friends who now also give to the Coalition. Their support has allowed the Coalition to maintain stable delivery of services, especially when the need is greatest: times of economic uncertainty when even more people need help.

The Schorrs are savvy donors, and use tax-advantaged giving strategies available to everyone through the Colorado Child Care Tax Credit and the Denver Enterprise Zone Tax Credit programs. They have used widely available giving techniques, including a donor advised fund and making gifts directly from their individual retirement accounts. In doing so, they have maximized their donations’ impact, minimized their tax burden, and protected other assets for their heirs while expressing their values through giving.

The Colorado Coalition for the Homeless is deeply grateful to Wag and Annalee for their commitment to lasting solutions, for now and the future.
